

The Bonner Brand: Going Beyond Expectations

Assess Yourself

Complete the Self-Assessment (separate handout). Then, assess yourself according to the three virtues of being an ideal team player (Humble, Hungry, Smart). Place them in ranking order of your strongest, next strongest, and weakest.

High (strongest)
Medium
Low (weakest)

Plan Your Work/Work Your Plan

Brainstorm opportunities for improving in the area of your lesser strength. Maybe you can identify a person in your life that could serve as a mentor to you to help you develop in your leadership-who might that person be?

From Complaint to Commitment

Part One: Reflect on something you recently complained about related to an experience in a team context. Jot down what your complaint was.

Part Two: Now, examine what commitments or convictions you hold are implied within that specific complaint- in other words- identify what you care most about. Fill in the blank:

“I am committed to the value or the importance of ...”

From Blame to Personal Responsibility

Now, ask yourself “What are you doing, or not doing, that is keeping your commitment from being more fully realized?” This is your chance to focus on your role, no matter how big or small a piece of the action it may be.
